Does it work when saving a project containing this WMS layer?

#5 - 2016-01-13 04:29 AM - aperi2007 -

I tried this.

I create a new project and drag-n-drop the qlr in it.

I see nothing as reported.

After I save the project and reopen it.

The project is empty.

- Target version set to Version 2.14

- Priority changed from Normal to Severe/Regression

- Crashes QGIS or corrupts data changed from No to Yes

Master (on Windows) also crashes here when opening the attached qlr, is fine on 2.12.2

What I meant was:

- Create a new project
- Create the WMS layer
- Save the project
- Close QGIS and reopen it
- Open the project

Is the layer there? Does QGIS crash?

Please attach the created project file.

No problem with this solution.

I add a project QGIS to this ticket.

See PR 2683 for the solution. It was a regression introduced in commit:ff3200fd6c507429b50c56b8307869d62cce6dcf. QLR files containing non-vector layers triggered this issue.

Interesting observation: - Opening an offending QLR via "Load layer definition" crashed QGIS.

- Opening an offending QLR via drag'n'drop just did nothing.
