Description

When saving a line creation session we confirm changes using attibute table. We notice that the popup table drifts up screen and disappears and only with difficulty can we locate it and move it back on the display screen.

Patches for this ticket saves position of window before destroying. Previously this was done after destructing window and it coauses that the saved position was without window frame (decoration) so there was always small offset which moves window up (in Windows) or down (in Linux). Now it should work properly (at least on my PC :-)).
